A tiny piece of steel, about half the size of a pen nib, caused the death of William Crandell, a laborer, employed on building girder work at Toronto.
He was working on the second floor helping cut off rivets that had to be changed, and held a chisel. Another man struck it with a hammer and a splinter of steel flew up, striking him in the neck, cutting a vein. The hole was not even large enough to allow the blood to flow.

The doctors are kept busy in the late fall attending to people who have injured themselves by overdoing the bathing fad at beaches during the summer vacations. If you are thin blooded and do not get warm as soon as you come out of the water, stay out of it altogether, except that you may paddle around with your feet and legs bare and take an air bath on the beach.

The general store at Hartington station, owned by Wesley Babcock, was completely destroyed by fire, on Monday morning, about three o'clock.
When the owner retired on Sunday evening, he left everything in the store alight, but was aroused from his slumbers about three o'clock by the fire signal. John Dowker, who lives near the store, happened to be up at this hour and noticed smoke coming out of the building, and then found the building on fire.

Thomas Walker, one of the oldest citizens of Campbellford, passed away.
He was born on Black Pots Farm in the parish of Old Deer, Aberdeenshire, Scotland, on March 9th, 1820. In 1845
he came to Canada, and after a short stay in Seymour Township he settled on a farm on the fifth concession of Rawdon, Hastings County, where he lived for between fifty and sixty years.
Mr. Walker was for many years
known as one of the most intelligent, progressive and successful farmers in this district.

Arrangements are in progress for an early meeting of the Evangelical Alliance to prepare a plan on a Dominion scale for a campaign to secure an amendment to the British North America Act to give the federal parliament power to enact a Dominion marriage law. Rev. E. D. Silcox, secretary of the Evangelical Alliance, stated that the meeting would probably be held before the end of the present month. It promises to be one of the most important and representative Protestant gatherings of the year.
The committee has a monster petition to the Dominion Parliament for a federal marriage law, prepared last spring as a means of counteracting
the ne temere decree. The spontaneous and earnest support of the committee's work in connection with the submission of that petition to the congregations all over Canada has given the Evangelical Alliance leaders confidence that the new battle to overcome the constitutional difficulty involved in the privy council's adverse judgement will be supplemented with equal vigor. Rev. Dr. McKay, editor of the Canadian Baptist, said: "The marriage question having been raised cannot be allowed to drop."

President of C.N.R., Returning From His Annual Tour of the West, Declares That While the Wheat Yield Is Good It Will Not Exceed Last Year's Output — C.N.R. to Help Handle 1913 Crop.

Toronto, Sept. 10.—"The Western Canadian crop, while equal to it, will not exceed that of last year," declared Sir William Mackenzie, president of the Canadian Northern Railway, in an interview here last night. Sir William returned to Toronto after his annual trip of inspection to the west. This year he proceeded right through to the coast. He returns in splendid health and spirits and with an optimistic outlook regarding the future progress and welfare of the C.N.R. in Western Canada.

Sir William said that he saw plenty of wheat cut throughout the west, but no threshing had been done yet. This was bad, as the crop had been hampered by much wet weather and the result would be that instead of the record crop prophesied the crop of the west would only equal that of last year.

The railway magnate was enthusiastic over the progress being made with the construction of his road in the west, and showed it by stating that he expected the completion of the C.N.R. transcontinental line right through from Montreal to Port Mann by next fall.

This was not all. Not only is the line to be completed right across by the fall of 1913, but the president stated that it was just possible that the Canadian Northern Railway would be a factor in moving the 1913 crop on the completed line. It was only just possible, but Sir William was hopeful.

The C.N.R. president had another announcement to make regarding the progress being made with the construction of his railway in the west. This was the completion of the connecting links between three important

MAINE TURNS BACK.

State Goes Republican Again by a Small Plurality.

Portland, Me., Sept. 10—Maine turned back to the Republican party in the state election yesterday, William T. Haines of Waterville being elected governor over Governor Frederick W. Plaisted, his Democratic opponent, who sought a second term, while the Republicans regained one of the two congressional districts lost to the Democrats two years ago. The new Legislature is expected to have a small Republican majority, although returns before midnight were not sufficient to show whether former Congressman Edwin C. Burleigh, Republican, or Senator Obadiah Gardner, Democrat, will be sent to the United States Senate for the term beginning next March.

Returns for governor from 550 out of 634 election districts gave Haines, Republican, 66,121; Plaisted, Democrat, 62,127.

The corresponding vote for 1910 was: Fernald, Republican, 60,556; Plaisted, Democrat, 57,501.

These returns show a Republican gain of 9 per cent, and a Democratic loss of 8 per cent. If the same percentage is maintained throughout the state, Haines' election is indicated by about 3,750 plurality, compared with 8,660 given Plaisted in 1910.

The Congressmen elected are: First district—Asher C. Hinds of Portland, Republican. Second district—D. J. McGillicuddy of Lewiston, Democrat. Third district—Forest Goodwin of Skowhegan, Republican. Fourth district—F. E. Guernsey of Dover, Republican. Hinds, McGillicuddy and Guernsey were re-elected.

Wheat Nearly All Cut.

Winnipeg, Sept. 10.—With the weather settled down to what promises to be a fine spell, harvesting is now progressing rapidly. General reports indicate better harvesting conditions than have existed so far, and with a moon last night prospects for a settled spell of fair weather are good. Apparently finding its level after variations of the last few days, the barometer remained steady Sunday and yesterday.

Y CALL SESSION.*Situation May Necessitate Being Assembled.

Mon., Sept. 10.—It is generally in official circles here assumed that the session will be convened in October, to deal with the situation in Mexico. President Taft notified the Mexican Government he will send troops to the border unless American forces are better protected in the future, and Congress will stand by the administration.

Officers have been ordered to their regiments and a number of vessels have been sent to the transport service. The situation is regarded as critical.

a special train free of charge for the purpose, and nearly every delegate took advantage of the trip.

They left the depot in the city at 2:15 and were let off at the crossing on the prison grounds. They were met by Mr. Armstrong, who conducted the party to the various points of interest around the farm.

The majority of the visitors had heard about the place, and were very anxious to learn all they could about it, how it was conducted and under what conditions the men worked. They were amazed at the manner in which the prisoners were treated, and it was the general opinion that no better means of treatment could be devised.

The afternoon was very hot and it was an interesting spectacle to see the delegates walking around the farm with their coats on their arms.

Hon. T. W. Crothers, Minister of Labor, and Keir Hardie, British M.P., accompanied the party and were delighted at what they saw. After a trip around among the buildings and the various works under way, the train returned to the city at 4 o'clock.

Reports received from all over the three prairie provinces indicate that harvesting is general, except in a few isolated cases on low-lying lands, where it will be a couple of days before a resumption will be made. There is no doubt that farmers have made far better progress than appeared possible under trying circumstances. Many districts report wheat all cut and quite half the oat crop is safe. Short straw has contributed much to speedy harvesting and has also reduced to a minimum the labor shortage which still exists. Threshing from the stock is badly handicapped by the soft ground after repeated rains.*A Bid For Trade.

London, Sept. 10.—(C.A.P. Cable)—Dr Stresmag, one of the managers of the powerful Hansa League of German Merchants and Manufacturers, will leave for America to-day to attend the International Congress of Chambers of Commerce at Boston and afterwards will proceed to Toronto, where he will address a meeting of Canadian and German business men.

The meeting is called for the purpose of organizing a German-Canadian Commercial League, which will maintain an active organization in both Canada and Germany, and will aim at the systematic development of trade between the two.

Fell 18 Inches and Died.

Orangeville, Sept. 10.—That James Dale, Caledon farmer, found dead in the barn of the Alexandra Hotel, was killed by a fall from a chair on Tuesday night, Sept. 3, was the verdict returned by Coroner Hendry's jury last night. Although he fell only about 18 inches, the manner in which he pitched forward caused his neck to be broken.

Coal 8,000,000 Tons Short.

Philadelphia, Sept. 10.—Officials of the big coal companies say that many of the miners who stopped work on April 1 have not returned to their places, and that because of lack of labor anthracite production will fall short about five million tons.

This, together with the shortage caused by the two and a half months' cessation of work, brings the year's shortage, to eight million tons.

HOW TO PRESERVE YOUTH AND BEAUTY.

One great secret of youth and beauty for the young woman or the mother is the proper understanding of her womanly system and well-being. Every woman, young or old, should know herself and her physical make up. A good way to arrive at this knowledge is to get a good doctor book, such as "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser," by R. V. Pierce, M. D., which can readily be procured by sending thirty-one cents for cloth-bound copy, addressing Dr. Pierce, at Buffalo, N. Y.

The womanly system is a delicate machine which can only be compared to the intricate mechanism of a beautiful watch which will keep in good running order only with good care and the proper oiling at the right time, so that the delicate mechanism may not be worn out. Very many times young women get old or run down before their time through ignorance and the improper handling of this human mechanism. Mental depression, a confused head, backache, headache, or hot flashes and many symptoms of derangement of the womanly system can be avoided by a proper understanding of what to do, in those trying times that come to all women.

MRS. WILLIAMS.

MRS. G. H. WILLIAMS, of Lynnhaven, Va., wrote: "It is six years since my health gave way. I had female trouble and all the doctors (I employed three) said I would die. I was not able to do my work, had to hire someone all the time. Finally, I read in the papers about Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and decided to try it. I had not taken but one bottle until I found it had done me good. I took, in all, five bottles of 'Favorite Prescription' and two of 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and now I am able to do all my housework, and have gained fourteen pounds. I advise all women who suffer from female trouble to try your 'Favorite Prescription.' It's the only medicine on earth."

A Master of Fiction.

Mr. Thomas Hardy is the grand old man of literature. Though he is no longer able to do much creative work he maintains a very keen interest in current problems, and is alive to the literary tendencies of the age. He is undoubtedly our greatest living novelist, and at least one of his novels is likely to endure as long as the English language.

Originally intended for an architect, he devoted his attention to literature, and soon created a great impression by his wonderful delineations of Dorset life. Such books as "Tess of the D'Urbervilles," "Far From the Madding Crowd," and "The Return of the Native," are treasured by lovers of literature throughout the civilized world, and Thomas Hardy enjoys an international reputation.

King George is a very great admirer of Mr. Hardy's works, and it was largely owing to his influence, when Prince of Wales, that the novelist was enabled to obtain the crown lands near Dorset, upon which he erected his house. Every spot of the surrounding country has been rendered famous by his novels, and enthusiastic admirers come from all parts of the globe to view the original sites which are depicted with such masterly skill in the novels.

Stock Exchange Strike.

There are just 18,000 seconds in a day's work on the London Stock Exchange, during every one of which thousands of pounds change hands. The Stock Exchange is always feverishly impatient to hear news of itself, and is, therefore, connected by thousands of private telephone wires with all parts of the kingdom. In addition it has a wonderful little newspaper issued ten times an hour. This, of course, contains the most recent financial quotations. About fifty special newsboys are employed to dash with lightning speed with copies immediate they leave the machine to various financiers, stockbrokers, etc.

On one occasion a well-organized strike of these lads completely paralyzed the working of the Exchange for over an hour. As a delay of seconds in distributing news bearing upon the market often causes serious fluctuations in prices, the lads' terms were accepted. Members have, however, provided very effectually against a second strike taking place, by keeping a double relay of lads, neither of the shifts ever being allowed to know the other. So if one struck, the other

VENTILATION.

How the Northwest Has Solved the Fresh Air Problem.

The Canadian Northwest has solved the ventilation problem—solved it in the simplicity of 1, 2, 3, says Lila E. Clendenen in The Globe.

The name of the particular individual who first applied this method does not appear to be generally known. In all probability he was some Scotchman in the employ of the Hudson's Bay Co.

Having built his log shack, he cut a space for light. The mud-and-stone or mud-and-pole fireplace came next. After chinking the inside of the shack with moss, there would be plenty of time for mudding it during the autumn, when mud holds to the logs.

But some cool night as the embers died on the hearth and the wind rushed and whirled through the lighting space the pioneer was chilled out of his dreams. Drawing his warm four-point blanket about him he would wonder: "How shall I keep that draught out in cold weather?"

Bright and fertile-brained with the morning, he picked up an empty unwashed flour bag or a piece of white cotton—it must have been the former, for he set the pace—and nailed it over the space with hand-beaten nails.

The flour-bag window has been in use in the north country for years. Many half-breeds and some Indians have used it with very satisfactory results as to health in their families. Indeed, there is nothing will kill the Indian quicker than unventilated housing. Alternately feasted and starved, sunned and exposed, as game and weather hail the native, fresh air is an imperative necessity to his existence.

How can this system be adopted to the city house? We have all used wire screens. Why not use white or green cotton screens when the wires are discarded for autumn and winter? These could be made on the same sliding principle. For sleeping rooms they are particularly to be recommended, as they can be placed in the window at night and shut out in the morning if desired. In an emergency tack or throw factory cheese cotton over the wire screen and fit it back into the window.

There are many rooms which would be the better of a permanent cloth screen. With all the fabrics of coarse and fine mesh displayed in the stores, the handy man or the handy woman need not require long to make an in-

PRESS COMMENTS.

Detroit Free Press—A stylish girl often takes a lot of admiration that really belongs to her dressmaker.

Hamilton Herald—Kermit Roosevelt, who is in England, refuses to discuss American politics. The young fellow must take after his mother.

Weekly Sun—Sir Wilfrid Laurier is too precious an asset of his party to subject him to the dangers of a winter tour on the stump in the North-West.

Ottawa Free Press—Taft's ankle is sprained and Roosevelt's throat is sore, so we naturally expect a slump in their batting averages during the next few days.

Philadelphia Inquirer—Judging from their satisfied and superior attitude one gets the impression that many men take all the credit for the beauty of their wives.

Toronto Mail and Empire—A professor says that flirting is much more common than it was a hundred years ago. This statement is directly contrary to the experience of most ladies, who find less and less of it as they grow older.

St John's Times and Star—There is a German peril, and need of strengthening the British fleet, and Canada is ready to do her share, but the season of hysterics appears to have passed with the departure of Mr. Borden from London.

Brantford Courier—Roosevelt says that what the United States needs is a man of his word in the White House. Let's see? What was the name of the gent who gave the solemn pledge that he would never again run for the Presidency?

St. Thomas Journal—N. W. Rowell, M.P., has met his constituents in Woodstock to discuss the question of workmen's compensation for injuries and get their views. Ever hear of Sir James Whitney going to any trouble to get acquainted with public sentiments?

Peterborough Examiner—It was in the good old Conservative days that the drift of young Canadians across the border began and was rapidly depleting this country of the best of its young blood. The drain continued till Laurier came into power; then it stopped short.

Edmonton Bulletin—The Government of New South Wales is taking measure to promote trade between that "colony" and the United States. The Australians seemingly do not feel that they would be doing anything either disloyal or dangerous in selling mutton to the "Yankees."

St. Catharines Journal—Discount it as we like here is a fact that must be faced. At a mass meeting recently in Berlin a hundred thousands working-men made open and formal protest against war. The hand or Social Democracy is partly on the wheel of state and it is guiding the ship away from war.

Vancouver Sun—It is shown that the steel industries of Canada are un-

A Lawsuit In Cricket.

Kentish cricketers once sought to enliven a match by a lawsuit. The story is told in a newspaper of 1726. "On Monday is to be determined a suit at law on Dartford Heath by a cricket match between the men of Chingford and Mr. Steed's men; they had a hearing about two years ago before Lord Chief Justice Pratt, when the merits of the case appeared to be that at a match between the above-said players the Chingford men refused to play on the game at a time the others had the advantage. The judge referred the said case back to Dartford Heath to be played on where they left off."

Quebec's Minerals.

The report of the Mines Branch of the Province of Quebec, showing that last year the value of the production of the Quebec mines amounted to $8,679,786. This is an increase of $1,350,505 as compared with the preceding year. From about $2,000,000 in 1899, the value of minerals has climbed to over $8,600,000—an increase of more than 300 per cent. In 1911 the mines of the province produce asbestos, copper ore, iron ores, mica, graphite, magnetite, and all kinds of articles for structural materials.

Murder and Suicide.

Ottawa, Sept. 10.—After refusing for the second time inside of twelve hours to tell Arthur Dupuis that she liked him, Mary Rose Fontaine was murdered by her rejected lover shortly after eight o'clock yesterday morning.

The tragedy occurred a short distance from the village of St. Joseph d'Orleans, eight miles from this city, in the County of Russell, and the murderer after committing his crime turned the double-barreled Winchester rifle upon himself and committed suicide.

Mountain Tunnel of Eight Miles.

Vancouver, B.C., Sept. 10.—It is understood in well-informed railway circles here that the vast improvements in building the double track of the C.P.R. between Calgary and Vancouver, to be carried out during the next four years, will include the driving of a double track tunnel a little over eight miles long through the summit of the Selkirks, in order to eliminate the steep grades over the Rogers pass, the scene of many dangerous snow-slides.

Death List Is Now Seven.

Newark, N.J., Sept. 10.—The death list resulting from the accident at the motordrome Sunday, when Eddie Hascha crashed into the grand stand on his machine during a motor-cycle race, was increased to seven yesterday by the death of E. Barnett, whose skull was fractured.

Three other victims, two of them boys under fourteen years of age, are not expected to survive. The coroner has decided an inquest unnecessary.

be the better of a permanent cloth screen. With all the fabrics of coarse and fine mesh displayed in the stores, the handy man or the handy woman need not require long to make an investment which will add years to his or her life, and right here and now increase mental alertness and general health.

Think of the ill-ventilated churches, schools theatres and other public buildings. Think of the annoyance, discomfort, illness and death resulting from icy draughts on perspiring people.

The cotton screen—preferably placed at the top of the window—modifies the danger and admits pure air. The janitor's objection to "heating all outdoors" is overcome.

Until such time as perfect ventilation is established in every home, church, theatre, office, factory, store and stable, the flour-bag system will if used prove invaluable in building red corpuscles into young Canadians' blood.

Dry Farming Congress.

Announcement has lately been made of the seventh international dry farming congress, which is to be held at Lethbridge, Alberta, Canada, Oct. 21-26 next. This movement had a small beginning several years ago. In the coming congress representatives are expected from every nation in which dry farming is practiced, and this refers particularly to western Canada and the dozen or more western states in which the production of cereals has been greatly increased through the adoption of dry farming methods. In the several days given to the convention there will be conferences on soils, tillage methods and machinery, crops and crop breedings, agricultural education, farm management, scientific research, agricultural colleges and experiment stations, while one of the most interesting features of the congress will be a special section whose discussions will be devoted to the interests and problems of farm women. Interest in the congress is being increased through the offering of substantial prizes for best exhibits of farm products and for the best articles treating of various phases of farm problems.

"Bulls" Not Irish.

Those who are not Irishmen sometimes trespass on Irish property. A French cure, preaching about sudden death, said, "Thus it is with us—we go to bed well and get up stone dead!"

An old French lawyer writing of an estate he had just bought added, "There is a chapel upon it in which my wife and I wish to be buried, if God spares our lives."

A merchant who died suddenly left in his bureau a letter to one of his correspondents which he had not sealed. His clerk, seeing it necessary to send the letter, wrote at the bottom, "Since writing the above I have died."

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

state and it is guiding the ship away from war.

Vancouver Sun—It is shown that the steel industries of Canada are unable to keep up with the demand for steel rails owing to the rapid development of the country. Large importations from Great Britain and the United States have consequently to be made, and heavy duties paid, thus adding to the expense of railroad-building. Why not reduce or take off the duty.

Calgary News-Telegram—The offer of certain ice cream merchants to give their first Sunday's receipts and a tithe of subsequent Sabbath Day income to the Associated Charities, if they are not molested in breaking the Lord's Day act, makes it appear that these gentlemen, who spurn Sunday closing, believe that charity covers a multitude of sins. So it does: but it does not cover infractions of the law.

Halifax Chronicle—The question of contribution may be settled without much difficulty if Mr. Borden is diplomatic and can satisfy the country that the crisis is such as will warrant immediate action. The policy of the Canadian people must be a Canadian navy, built by Canada—as soon as this is practicable—officered and manned by Canadians and controlled by the Canadian people. That was the essence of the Laurier policy. It embraces the only principle which can be brought to any satisfactory issue.

Ottawa Free Press—It takes the Cabinet and a vote of the House of Commons and Senate to raise or lower the Canadian tariff a single degree on any one article. But an obscure departmental official can say: "In the future binders and threshers coming in from the United States shall be valued at $150 each for duty estimation instead of $100 as formerly." The effect of this, in operation, is the raising of the tariff on these articles from 20 per cent. to 30 per cent., or, in other words, the addition of 50 per cent. to the present tariff.

Canadian Courier—Some of the Ottawa newspaper correspondents, notably Mr. Hamilton of The Toronto News, are still referring to the "tin-pot" or "Laurier" navy. These references are quite unworthy. Mr. Hamilton, an ex-military man and a university graduate, shows a lack of judgement quite inconsistent with his record as a journalist. Perhaps it was done by a "substitute," while Mr. Hamilton was on holidays. If so, Mr. Hamilton has a grievance. But some Conservatives, who are neither members of Parliament nor of the Press Gallery, are also guilty of using the same phrase. True, Canada's navy is small and insignificant, but it was a beginning, and it was Canada's not Laurier's. Personally, I was one of those who thought the Laurier policy might have been broader, but a building program involving $4,000,000 and an annual upkeep of six or seven million dollars is not so bad a start. Indeed it was an excellent beginning, and as such The Canadian Courier supported it. The Conservatives who talk this way are perfectly free to criticize, but it should be a reasonable criticism. To throw mud at a national movement for political advantage is the meanest and most despicable kind of partisan action. Besides, the Conservative policy must ultimately be a Canadian navy.

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

THERE are only seven jokes in the world, but they have been made over so many times that their own mother wouldn't know 'em.

Every dog has his day, but the nights belong to the cats.

A man never believes in luck unless it goes against him.

Some women are born with happy dispositions; others marry good natural men.

No woman thinks much of a social function to which she isn't invited.

The man who is unapproachable after a good dinner has either a bad disposition or dyspepsia.

When a man doesn't feel sleepy in church these hot days he begins to worry over the state of his health.

Women seldom agree over the neighbor's baby, the state of the schools and the new minister.

Never ask a favor of a man when his favorite ball team is glued to the bottom of the column.

When the joke is on us jokers seem the most foolish, inconsequential and most easily to be dispensed with folk in the world.

That young and tender season,
How could we harvest hay?

If it were always springtime
We couldn't raise a crop,
And those who live by eating
I fear would have to stop.
We need the other seasons
To make the pumpkins thrive.
Without the pines and so forth
How could we keep alive?

The seasons are not only
For us to sit and say
"My goodness," to each other,
But it's a lovely day!"
We have to use the weather
For making corn and wheat,
Potatoes, peas and onions
And other things to eat.

Of course it's mighty pleasant
To watch the buds of spring
In all their grace and grandeur
Their vernal offerings bring,
But it is quite as pleasant
To walk across the field
And see them in the harvest,
A fat, substantial yield.

Longed For a Sensation.
"I thought you said you intended to marry."
"I did and I do."
"Why don't you, then?"
"Can't find the right sort of girl."
"None good enough, I suppose."
"You needn't sneer. It isn't that."
"What then?"
"I want to find one capable of driving me to drink."

Might Be Looking at It.
"Are you the man who advertised a dog for sale?"

"Yes."
"Can I see the creature?"
"Sure; any time."
"Pardon me, are you the dog?"

Some Advantage.

"He came to this town a tramp."

"And how did you come?"

"I was born here."

"Then he had the advantage of you that he did bring some clothes along."

The Bookkeeper.

"Does your husband get enough exercise?"

"Oh, yes!"
"How does he take it?"
"Well, I heard him talking about running up columns all day."

His Reason.

"Come go on a fishing trip with us."
"Thank you; no."
"Why not?"
"I can do myself up cheaper and have more fun at it."

The Universal Tool.

"How are you going to repair that boat? We came away and forgot to bring the tool box."

"Never mind. My wife has a hairpin."

The Bill Collector.

"Money is hard to get these days."
"Yes, and I notice by observing some of you tightwads that it is hard to let go of too."

Not For Moderns.

The pies that mother used to make were all right in their way, but they would give the stomach ache to weaklings of today.

Hennequin's Infant Tablets

Save Babies' Lives. For Babies and Small Children. (Made in France.)

Dr. Hennequin's Infant Tablets saved our little girl's life. Three doctors said she could not live. The Tablets cured her.—MR. E. R. MCBRIDE, Napanee, Ont.

My baby was so weak from sickness that he could hardly walk. We thought he would die. We could find nothing to help him. I was given a sample package of three Hennequin Tablets; we used them; I saw a change at once. We secured the Tablets and our baby improved every day, and is now a bright, fat, good natured boy; you could not believe he was the same child. They certainly cured my baby and saved his life. I believe them to be the best medicine ever sold for babies. Mothers if your babies are not well take my advice and try these Tablets.—MRS. JAMES RIDDELL, Barrydale, Ont.

We have hundreds of such letters. If the Tablets were not what you need we would not offer to give them away and prefer them. If your baby is not well send for trial package.

Hennequin Tablets have the letter "H" stamped upon them—this is your guarantee.

HOSTILE HEIRS DISAPPOINTED

He Knew How to Make a Will.

When William Marvel, of Tuckersmith Township, Ont., died, every person in the vicinity expected to see a lively legal battle between the heirs.

The old man had not been on good terms with any of his relatives and was equally averse to lawyers. It was inferred that he would leave no will and the rival claimants were ready to do battle, legally of course, for their "rights."

One of the first things found among his papers, however, was a will made out on a BAX Will Form. That settled the matter definitely—there was no fight.

It has been found that it is useless to dispute wills made on the BAX Will Forms. The moral is obvious—to save lawyer's fees and be sure that your wishes will be carried out in case of death—use a BAX Will Form. Each form is accompanied by a specimen will and full instructions for your guidance, but be sure to get a BAX Legal Will Form, as they are copyrighted and indisputable.

For sale by all stationers and drug-gists at 35 cents, or sent on receipt of price by the BAX Will Form Company, 280 College street, Toronto. For sale by A. E. Paul, Napanee.

How an Orang Outang Travels.

It is a most interesting sight to watch an orang outang make its way through the jungle. It walks slowly along the larger branches in a semi-erect attitude, this being apparently caused by the length of its arms and the shortness of its legs. It invariably selects those branches which intermingle with those of a neighboring tree, on approaching which it stretches out its long arm and grasping the boughs opposite, seems first to shake them as if to test their strength and then deliberately swings itself across to the next branch, which it walks along, as before. It does not jump or spring, as monkeys usually do, and never appears to hurry itself, unless some real danger presents. Yet, in spite of its apparently slow movements, it gets along far quicker than a person running through the forest beneath.

On examining the instrument the officials found a big bullet inside. It appears that when an exploring trip around the unfortunate spot have touched this tongue to move it, and consequently off the gun. The general commanding the station sent the spider to Town Museum, where he is seen with a card under entitling him the "Little Spider" and giving a full account venture with the Cape Town time gun, which proved a venture, however.

Women Guests at the Cape Town

The invasion of the House by women, writes T. P. S. Weekly, has gone on with almost every year. I heard the smile of incredulity when from the daughter of the year 1880, that a room in which you could ask a lady to take a seat and give a cup of tea.

When she insisted, I went of this room, of the existence I had up to that conversation ignorant, and, sure enough, was such a room, but where it was one of those dark, subterranean, chambers of the House was then full; the was scanty and squalid; and the attitude of the House to the cause of women room was given up to the same time, to the mess attendants of the House like the musicians of an orchestra who were put into the servants

Close Lower—Live Stock—

Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, Sept. 9.—Government estimates regarding wheat corresponded almost exactly with figures computed in advance here today by private crop experts. Latest trading left corn unchanged to 1/4c down, oats up a shade to 1/4c to 3/4c, and provisions varying from Saturday's level to 12/4c decline.

The Liverpool market closed today 1/4d lower than Saturday on wheat and 1/4d higher on corn. Berlin wheat closed 1/4c higher, Budapest 3/4c higher, and Antwerp 3/4c lower.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, Sept. 9.—There was a good demand from foreign buyers for new crop Manitoba spring wheat at a further reduction in prices of 3d to 6d per quarter, but on the further decline in Winnipeg exporters accepted bids for 400,000 bushels for October-November shipment. The demand for old crop wheat was also fair at a good premium over new. A good business continues to be done in oats over the cable, and the local market is strong. There is a good demand for ocean grain room, and rates are steadily advancing. Considerable business has already been done for shipment from St. John, N.B. for this winter. Cheese active, but firm. Exports for the week were 64,696 boxes, against 68,816 last year. Eggs active. Demand for provisions fair.

The Genuine Always Superior to the Imitation

The experienced buyer never permits the shrewd merchant to convince him that an imitation is superior to the genuine advertised article. In refusing a substitute he protects himself and the manufacturers who have expended enormous sums in giving the public information regarding their products.

Advertised articles have stood the test of public approval on their merits and materials embracing their make-up. The mere fact that they are imitated is competent testimony of their worth.

You are safe in rejecting the article offered as "just as good."

CATTLE MARKETS.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Sept. 9.—At the Montreal Stock Yards west end market the receipts of live stock for the week ending Sept. 7 were 1200 cattle, 4600 sheep and lambs, 2400 hogs and 400 calves. The supply on the market this morning for sale consisted of 1100 cattle, 3100 sheep and lambs, 1400 hogs and 200 calves.

A firmer feeling prevailed in the market for cattle this morning owing to the smaller supplies offered than a week ago, and the scarcity of choice steers. Choice steers sold as high as $7, while full loads of good stock brought $6.50, and fair $5.50 per 100 pounds. The demand from canners for bulls and cows was good, of which the supply was fair, but owing to the keener competition prices for such ruled 25¢ per 100 higher.

The tone of the market for lambs was weaker and prices since this day week show a decline of 25¢ for Ontario stock and 25¢ to 50¢ for Quebec. A feature of this trade of late has been the demand from Ontario packers for supplies in this market, and some large lots were shipped to Toronto at the latter end of last week. At the above reduction there was a good demand, and the trade was active. Ontario lambs sold at from $6.25 to $7, and Quebec lambs at $5.25 to $5.75 per 100. In sheep, the feeling is steady, as supplies are just about equal to the requirements, and prices show no change. The demand for calved was good, owing to the small supply.

The market for live hogs was unchanged, notwithstanding the fact that prices were higher in Toronto. The supply is sufficient to fill requirements, and a steady trade is doing at $8.25 to $8.75 per 100 pounds, weighed off cars for selected lots.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $6.75 to $7; do. medium, $5 to $6; do., common, $4 to $4.25; canners, $2.75 to $3; butchers' cattle, choice cows, $5 to $5.25; do., medium, $3.75 to $4; do., bulls, $3.50 to $5; milkers, choice, each, $60 to $70; do., common and medium, each, $40 to $50; springers, $30 to $35.

DIVINE REWARDS ARE ETERNAL LIFE

Eternal Death the Divine Punishment for Incorrigible.

Pastor Russell, In Eloquent Discourse, Yesterday at Columbus, Ohio, Brought Comfort and Satisfaction to Many Who Listened to His Exposition of a Text Misapplied by Many.

PASTOR RUSSELL

Columbus, Ohio, Sept. 8. — Pastor Russell chose for his text to-day one that has doubtless been misapplied by many theologians. It was the last verse of the Parable of the Sheep and the Goats: "These shall go away into everlasting punishment, but the righteous into life eternal."

—Matt. 25:46.

Pastor Russell proved on this occasion, as he usually does, that he has a long lead on many of the theologians of the past and present. His position with respect to this Parable is that the application of it is not to this Age, but to the future one. This is distinctly shown in the opening verse of the Parable itself, he said: "When the Son of Man shall come in His glory, and all the holy angels with Him, then shall He sit upon the Throne of His Glory." (V. 31.)

And besides, the Pastor said, When the Son of Man shall sit on His Throne and have before Him all nations, it is evident from Scripture that the true Church will sit with Him; that the nations will be the remainder of humanity. As proof of this he quoted Scripture: "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with Me in My Throne." (Rev. 3:21.) Another, "To him that overcometh will I give power over the nations." (Rev. 2:26.) And again, "Know ye not that the saints shall judge the world,"—"all nations." —I. Cor. 6:2.

That this work of judging and reigning over the nations of earth is not to be during a day of twenty-four hours, he said, is evident from Scripture also. For instance, "They shall be priests of God and of Christ and shall reign with Him a thousand years." (II. Peter 3:7, 8; Rev. 20:6.) It is plainly shown also, he said, that this exercise of world-wide power will be during Satan's imprisonment, when his influence for evil, exerted for six thousand years previously, will be absolutely restrained until the thousand years shall have ended.

There is no doubt that the correct view of the doctrine of Election has much to do with clarifying the theological atmosphere of the miasma of the past. If everybody could get the Bible focus upon this important doctrine, every other theological question would become as clear as noonday. If everybody could see clearly that the true Church is being elected, or selected, in this Age, according to faithfulness and character-development, by way of preparation for the great service to be rendered, the world in the next Age, there would be few problems remaining to be cleared up.

SUMMER KITCHEN.

How This Room May Become a Pleasant Resort.

COMFORT OF ELECTRIC FAN.

The Matter of Dress When Working In Summer of Great Importance to Cook—Lots of Nervous Energy Saved by Wearing Hair Net.

What with the servant question and the hot weather and the insistent demands of her household for "three square meals a day," the old fashioned housekeeper is sorely tried these days.

She would probably scorn the thought that housework might be made really pleasant. But how much more comfortable would it be for her to string beans or peel potatoes while sitting in the breeze of an electric fan!

Another point: Few housewives realize the importance of the kitchen chair, and many of them would feel less tired at the end of the day if they made greater use of it. Not that one should be constantly sitting and then in a moment jumping up to arrange something that needs immediate attention. That is neither resting nor cooling. But the work can be so arranged that one can sit for fifteen or twenty minutes at a time, long enough really to be rested.

The fireless cooker is another of the scientific helps which aid in making the kitchen a pleasant summer resort. Not only that; they also aid the housewife to get out of the kitchen for hours at a time by taking care of her whole dinner. The roast and the vegetables are shut up in this wonder working box, and off goes the housewife to shop or to darn stockings by the window of the living room or to get out into the woods if they be accessible.

The matter of dress in the kitchen is all important in the summer time. For instance, no woman can work well while brushing back wisps of hair that insist upon sticking to her face in the hot weather. That woman would save lots of time and nervous energy by wearing a net. And her appearance would be improved.

It is important also to wear comfortable shoes in the kitchen, not just old ones that are worn down at the heel. The heels of the kitchen shoes should be kept as scrupulously even as those of the street shoes for the sake of comfort. Soft kid or canvas shoes with low heels or low rubber heels are most comfortable, and in hot weather much relief may be obtained by changing the shoes at least once a day.

A neat little one piece calico or gingham dress with short sleeves and low neck is the most practical for kitchen use, much better than loose "jackets," which flop about and are forever getting into things, and infinitely neater and more attractive than the old fashioned "wrapper."

The Value of Vegetables.

Spinach, containing as it does a large amount of iron, can scarcely be ignor-ed as a valuable vegetable dish.

Mexican Courtship.

A Mexican girl is courted by a unique process. Her would-be lover walks up and down the street on the opposite side and stares at her window by the hour. If his appearance is agreeable she appears at the window after a few days of this performance. When the acquaintance develops he is introduced to her papa, and after the necessary marriage arrangements have been made he is introduced to her. The preliminary tramping and staring are called "doing the bear."

Average Amount of Sleep.

Usually the amount of sleep is in inverse ratio to the strength and development of consciousness. Thus children need more sleep than adults. Some men need very little rest, and the same may be said of women. However, eight hours is the average amount required by the human body to restore its vitality by complete rest. If less is taken one's health is apt to be impaired. A good night's sleep will do more toward building up general health than all the tonics known.

The Sheep—the Goats—the Fire.

The Parable proceeds to show the separating work that will progress throughout the thousand-year exercise of Divine power and authority on earth. At its conclusion all the peoples of the nations will have taken their places, either as sheep or goats. To the sheep class will be said, "Come, ye blessed of My Father, inherit the Kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world."

The sheep class of the Parable represent all of Adam's race brought back to perfection by the process of Restitution during Messiah's reign of a thousand years. (Acts 3:19-21.) To them will come the dominion which Adam lost and which Jesus redeemed at Calvary. Next the fate of the goat class is stated—not in literal language, but in symbol. It should be borne in mind that "without a parable spake He not to the people." In other words, everything which Jesus said to the people was figurative, to the end that only those of the right condition of heart might be able to understand, as this was the character of the class that God designed should be accorded the honor of reigning with Messiah over the earth. To these "it is given to know the Mysteries of the Kingdom of Heaven."—Matt. 13:11.

The message of the great King to the goat class, the Parable proceeds to show, will be, "Depart from Me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the Devil and his angels." There is a large class of short-sighted people who while thinking that the goats represent an incorrigible class, insist that the fire is real, and not symbolic. But there is an increasingly large class of Bible students who recognize, said Pastor Russell, that "fire" throughout the Bible is used figuratively to represent destruction. He pointed to St. Peter's summing up of the fate of the incorrigibly wicked as follows: "These, as natural brute beasts, made to be taken and destroyed, speak evil of the things that they understand not; and shall utterly perish in their own corruption."—II. Peter 2:12.

The world, continued Pastor Russell, never lost heaven and is nowhere promised heaven. Adam's loss was an earthly Eden and human perfection. Jesus declares that He "came to seek and to save that which was lost." Among other things, the work of His Kingdom for a thousand years will be the bringing of earth to a Paradise condition. And He, together with those who shall be associated with Him, will restore all the willing and obedient of mankind to all that was lost. He will bring them back again to the image and likeness of God in the flesh.

Ready To Take Up the Role.

Mr. F. R. Benson, the well-known English Shakespearian actor, has always been passionately addicted to outdoor sports. In his Varsity days he achieved fame as a runner, and when touring with his companies he makes a practice of organizing athletic contests.

The actor's fondness for athletics once led to a humorous misunderstanding. Mr. Benson desired to ascertain if a certain young actor could take up a part in "The Merry Wives of Windsor" at Rugby, so he wired, "Can you play Rugby? If so come at once." Back came the reply: "Arrive at 4 p.m. Played half-back for Stratford."

The Value of Vegetables.

Spinach, containing as it does a large amount of iron, can scarcely be ignored as a valuable vegetable dish.

Rhubarb is rich in oxalic acid, which does much to tone up the system.

Onions contain much nutrition, but are most valuable for their pungent oil, which is rich in sulphur.

Asparagus, cabbage, cauliflower and celery are chiefly valued for their mineral salts and for the bulk, variety and relish they give to the diet.

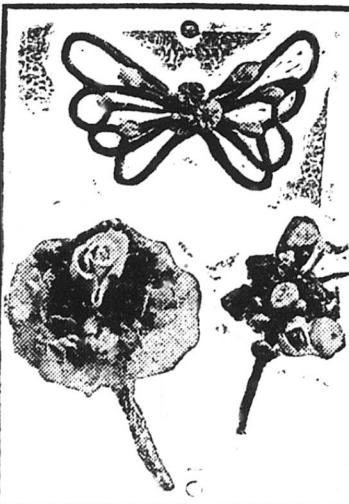

Cabbage contains a great deal of sulphur and for this reason frequently causes flatulence. Cauliflower, which is of the same family, is more easily digested.

Celery is said to be more digestible cooked than raw.

Beets, carrots and parsnips all contain a large percentage of sugar. Carrots and parsnips when young and tender are very nutritious.

For Evening Wear.

Corsage bouquets, boutonnieres and hair ornaments made of ribbon flowers are the craze just now, and these dainty ornaments are more often worn than the real flowers. Illustrated here are a coiffure butterfly, an old fashioned posy bouquet and a smart little boutonniere, all made of ribbon flowers.

War Experiments.

Near Okehampton the other day a dummy village that had been especially built for the purpose was blown to pieces by shell fire from a battery of heavy guns placed some distance away, the object of the curious and costly experiment being, of course, to find out exactly what would happen to a real village in similar circumstances. Says Pearson's Weekly:

The idea, which is not exactly a new one, was borrowed originally from Germany, where some very elaborate experiments on similar lines have been conducted.

First Steam Trawler.

The death took place recently at South Shields of Mr. David Allan, who was seventy-two years of age. The deceased, a native of Leith, was credited with being the designer, builder, and sailor of the first successful steam fishing vessel ever put into the water. After much experimenting he launched at Leith, in 1877, a vessel which he named Onward. This is claimed as the first steam drifter and the only one afloat at the time.

THE THREE GUARDSMEN

By ALEXANDRE DUMAS

"The queen is my enemy, but is not yours, sire. On the contrary, she is a devoted, submissive and irreproachable wife. Allow me, then, sire, to intercede for her with your majesty."

"Let her humble herself, then, and come to me first."

"On the contrary, sire, set the example."

"What! I make advances first?" said the king. "Never!"

"Sire, I entreat you to do so."

"Besides, in what manner can I make advances first?"

"Give a ball. You know how much the queen loves dancing. I will answer for it her resentment will not hold out against such an attention."

"M. le Cardinal, you know that I do not like mundane pleasures."

"The queen will only be the more grateful to you, as she knows your antipathy for that amusement. Besides, it will be an opportunity for her to wear those beautiful diamonds which you gave her recently on her birthday and with which she has since had no occasion to adorn herself."

Then the cardinal, hearing the clock strike 11, bowed low, demanding permission of the king to retire and suplicating him to come to a good understanding with the queen.

Anne of Austria, who in consequence of the seizure of her letter; expected reproaches, was much astonished the next day to see the king make some attempts at reconciliation with her. Her first movement was repulsive. Overpersuaded by the advice of her women, she at last had the appearance of beginning to forget. The king took advantage of this favorable moment to tell her that he had the intention evening before the fete.

"Madame," said he, with dignity, "there will shortly be a ball at the Hotel de Ville. I wish that, to do honor to our worthy aldermen, you should appear at it in ceremonial costume and particularly ornamented with the diamond studs which I gave you on your birthday. That is my answer."

The answer was terrible. Anne of Austria believed that Louis XIII knew all and that the cardinal had persuaded him to employ this long dissimulation of seven or eight days, which, likewise, was characteristic. She became excessively pale and was unable to reply by a single syllable.

"You hear, madame," said the king, who enjoyed this embarrassment to its full extent, but without guessing the cause, "you hear, madame. You will appear at this ball and with those studs?"

"Yes."

The queen's paleness, if possible, increased. The king perceived it and enjoyed it with his cold cruelty.

"Then that is agreed," said he.

"But on what day will this ball take place?" asked Anne of Austria.

Louis XIII felt instinctively that he ought not to reply to this question.

"Oh, very shortly, madame," said he, "but I do not precisely recollect the date of the day. I will ask the cardinal. Then you will appear?"

"Yes, sire."

"Very well," said the king, retiring; "I depend upon you."

The queen made a courtesy, less from etiquette than because her knees were sinking under her.

"I am lost," murmured the queen; "lost, for the cardinal knows all, and it is he who urges on the king, who is heart and, seeing nothing but sincerity in her beautiful eyes, embraced her tenderly. Then she ran to a little table upon which were pens, ink and paper. She wrote two lines, sealed the letter with her private seal and gave it to Mme. Bonacieux.

"And now," said the queen, "we are forgetting one very necessary thing—money."

Mme. Bonacieux blushed.

"Yes, that is true," said she, "and I will confess to your majesty that my husband"—

"Your husband has none; is that what you would say?"

"Oh, yes, he has some, but he is very avaricious—that is his fault. Nevertheless, let not your majesty be uneasy. We will find means."

"And I have none, either," said the queen. "But wait a minute."

Anne of Austria ran to her jewel case.

"Here," said she, "here is a ring of great value, as I have been assured. It came from my brother, the king of Spain. It is mine, and I am at liberty to dispose of it. Take this ring, make money of it and let your husband set out."

"In an hour you shall be obeyed, madame."

"You see the address," said the queen, speaking so low that Mme. Bonacieux could hardly hear what she said—"To Milord Duke of Buckingham, London."

Mme. Bonacieux kissed the hands of the queen, concealed the paper in the bosom of her dress and disappeared with the lightness of a bird.

Ten minutes afterward she was at home. As she told the queen she had

"But what do you requi then? Come, let us see!"

"I have told you. You m instantly, monsieur. You accomplish loyally the commi which I deign to charge yo that condition I pardon ev forret everything: and, still ance of beginning to forget. The king took advantage of this favorable moment to tell her that he had the intention of shortly giving a fete.

A fete was so rare a thing for poor Anne of Austria that at this announcement, as the cardinal had predicted, the last trace of her resentment disappeared, if not from her heart, at least from her countenance. She asked upon what day this fete would take place, but the king replied that he must consult the cardinal upon that head.

In fact, every day the king asked the cardinal when this fete should take place, and every day the cardinal, under some pretense or other, deferred fixing it. Ten days passed away thus.

On the eighth day after the scene we have described, the cardinal received a letter with the London stamp, which only contained these lines:

"I have them, but I am unable to leave London for want of money; send me 500 pistoles, and four or five days after I have received them I shall be in Paris."

On the same day that the cardinal received this letter, the king put his customary question to him.

Richelieu counted on his fingers and said to himself:

"She will arrive, she says, four or five days after having received the money. It will require four or five days for the transmission of the money, four or five days for her to return, that makes ten days. Now, allowing for contrary winds, accidents and a woman's weakness, we cannot make it altogether less than twelve days."

"Well, M. le Duc," said the king, "you made your calculations?"

"Yes, sire, today is the 20th of September; the aldermen of the city give a fete on the 3d of October. That will fall in wonderfully well. You will not appear to have gone out of your way to please the queen."

Then the cardinal added:

"Apropos, sire, do not forget to tell her majesty the evening before the fete that you should like to see how her diamond studs become her."

CHAPTER XIII.

Bonacieux at Home.

It was the second time the cardinal had mentioned these diamond studs to the king. Louis XIII. was struck with these repetitions and began to fancy that this recommendation concealed some mystery. He hoped in a conversation with Anne of Austria to obtain some information from that conversation and afterward to come upon his Eminence with some secret which the cardinal either knew or did not know, but which in either case would raise him infinitely in the eyes of his minister.

He went, then, to the queen and, according to custom, accosted her with fresh menaces against those who surrounded her.

"But," cried Anne of Austria, tired of these vague attacks, "but, sire, you do not tell me all that you have in your heart. What have I done, then? Let me know what crime I have committed. It is impossible that your majesty can make all this to do about a letter written to my brother!"

The king, attacked in a manner so direct, did not know what to answer, and he thought that this was the moment for expressing the desire which he was not to have made until the sinking under her.

"I am lost," murmured the queen; "lost, for the cardinal knows all, and it is he who urges on the king, who as yet knows nothing, but will soon know everything. I am lost."

She knelt upon a cushion and prayed, with her head buried between her palpitating arms. In fact, her position was terrible. She had not a soul in the world in whom she could confide with safety.

"Can I be of no service to your majesty?" said all at once a voice full of sweetness and pity.

The queen turned sharply round, for there could be no deception in the expression of that voice. It was a friend who spoke thus. It was the pretty Mme. Bonacieux. She had been engaged in arranging the dresses and linen in a closet when the king entered. She could not get out and had heard all.

The queen uttered a piercing cry at finding herself surprised, for in her trouble she did not at first recognize the young woman who had been given to her by Laporte.

"Oh, fear nothing, madame!" said the young woman, clasping her hands and weeping herself at the queen's sorrows. "I am your majesty's body and soul, and, however far I may be from you, however inferior may be my position, I believe I have discovered a means of extricating your majesty from your trouble."

"Look me in the face!" cried the queen. "I am betrayed on all sides! Can I trust in you?"

"Oh, madame," cried the young woman, falling on her knees, "upon my soul, I am ready to die for your majesty! There are traitors here, but by the holy name of the Virgin I swear that none is more devoted to your majesty than I am. Those studs which the king speaks of, you gave them to the Duke of Buckingham, did you not? Those studs were in a little rosewood box which he held under his arm? Am I deceived? Is it not so, madame? We must have them back again."

"Yes, without doubt it must be so!" cried the queen. "But how am I to act? How can it be effected?"

"Some one must be sent to the duke. Place confidence in me, madame. Do me that honor, my queen, and I will find a messenger."

"But I must write."

"Oh, yes; that is indispensable! Two words from the hand of your majesty and your own private seal."

"But these two words would bring about my condemnation, divorce, exile!"

"Yes, if they fell into infamous hands, but I will answer for these two words being delivered to their address."

"Oh, I must then place my life, my honor, my reputation, all in your hands?"

"Yes, yes, madame, you must, and I will save them all."

"But how—tell me at least how?"

"My husband has been set at liberty these two or three days. I have not yet had time to see him again. He will do anything I wish. He will set out upon receiving an order from me without knowing what he carries, and he will remit your majesty's letter without even knowing it is from your majesty."

The queen took the two hands of the young woman with a burst of emotion, gazed at her as if to read her very

with the lightness of a bird.

Ten minutes afterward she was at home. As she told the queen she had not seen her husband since his liberation, she was ignorant of the change that had taken place in him with respect to the cardinal, a change which had since been strengthened by two or three visits from the Count de Rochefort, who had become the best friend of Bonacieux.

"Take this ring, make money of it and let your husband set out."

She found Bonacieux alone. The worthy mercer had, immediately upon entering his house communicated to his wife the news of his happy return, and his wife had replied by congratulating him and telling him that the first moment she could steal from her duties should be devoted to paying him a visit.

The first moment had been delayed five days, which under any other circumstances might have appeared rather long to Master Bonacieux, but he had in the visit he had made to the cardinal and in the visits Rochefort had made him ample subjects for reflection.

On her side, Mme. Bonacieux's thoughts constantly reverted to D'Artagnan, that handsome young man who was so brave and appeared to be so much in love with her. Married at eighteen to M. Bonacieux, having always lived among her husband's friends, Mme. Bonacieux had remained insensible to vulgar seductions, but at this period the title of gentleman had a particularly great influence with the bourgeoisie or citizen class, and D'Artagnan was a gentleman.

The married couple then, although they had not seen each other for eight days and that during that time various events had taken place in which both were concerned, accosted each other with a degree of preoccupation. Nevertheless M. Bonacieux manifested real joy and advanced toward his wife with open arms.

Mme. Bonacieux presented her sleek compliment loyally the command which I deign to charge you that condition I pardon you for forget everything; and, still and she held out her hand give you my love again."

Bonacieux was a coward who was avaricious. But his wife—he was softened. Mme. Bonacieux saw that he hesitated.

"Come! Have you made up?" said she.

"But, my dear love, reflect upon what you require of me is far from Paris, ver perhaps the commission you charge me is not wiser."

"Of what consequence is avoid them?"

"Well, then, Mme. Bonacieux the mercer, "well, then, I refuse. Intrigues terrify me seen the Bastille. That's place."

"Well, if you do not go instant I will have you a the queen's orders, and I you placed in that Bastille dread so much."

"Have me arrested on the queen," said he, "and I plead to his eminence."

At once Mme. Bonacieux she had gone too far, and I minded at having communed.

"Well, I will give it up, the young woman, sighing well as it is. Say no more!

"Yes; at least you show what I should have to do is replied Bonacieux, who regretted too late that Rochefort had become the best friend of wife's secrets.

"It is of no use for you to think about it," said the young woman an instinctive mistrust paled to draw back.

He resolved, then, that hasted to the residence of de Rochefort and tell him queen was seeking for a message to send to London.

"Pardon me for leaving he; "but, not knowing you to see me. I had made an appointment with a friend. I shall soon wait only a few minutes for you to come and conduct you to Louvre."

"Thank you, monsieur," re Bonacieux. "I shall return to the Louvre by myself."

Bonacieux kissed his hand and set off at a quick pace.

"Well," said Madame when her husband had shut door, and she found he "there wanted nothing but that poor creature but be a nationalist. And I, who have aided him to the queen. She will one of those wretches with palace swarms and which about her as spies. Ah, M. I hate you, and by my word pay for this!"

ONTARIO WOMAN'S FORTUNE

Freed From That Weak, Languid, Always Tired Feeling, by Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound.

Thessalon, Ont.—"I cannot speak too highly of your medicine. When my appetite is poor and I have that weak, languid, always tired feeling, I get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it builds me up, gives me strength, and restores me to perfect health again. It is truly a blessing to women, and I cannot speak highly enough of it. I take pleasure in recommending it to others." —Mrs. ANNIE CAMERON, Thessalon, Ont.

Women who are suffering from those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should not lose sight of these facts or doubt the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore their health.

There are probably hundreds of thousands, perhaps millions of women in the United States who have been benefited by this famous old remedy, which was produced from roots and herbs over 30 years ago by a woman to relieve woman's suffering. If you are sick and need such a medicine, why don't you try it?

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

or say anything that may compromise any one."

Then the young woman confided to him the terrible secret. D'Artagnan was radiant with joy and pride. This secret which he possessed, this woman whom he loved!

"I will go," said he. "I will go at once."

"How! You will go!" said Mme. Bonacieu; "and your regiment, your captain?"

"By my soul, you have made me forget all that, dear Constance! Yes, you are right—I must obtain leave of absence. I will go this very evening to M. de Treville, whom I will request to ask this favor for me of his brother-in-law, M. D'Artagnan."

"But you have perhaps no money."

"Perhaps is too much," said D'Artagnan, smiling.

"Then," replied Mme. Bonacieu, opening a cupboard and taking from it the very bag which half an hour before her husband had caressed so affectionately. "take this bag."

"The cardinal's!" cried D'Artagnan, breaking into a loud laugh. "It will be a doubly amusing affair to save the queen with the cardinal's money."

"You are an amiable and a charming young man," said Mme. Bonacieu. "Be assured you will not find her majesty ungrateful."

"Oh, I am already more than compensated!" cried D'Artagnan. "I love you. You permit me to tell you that I do. That is already more happiness than I dared to hope for."

"Silence!" said Mme. Bonacieu, starting. "Some one is talking in the street. It is my husband."

D'Artagnan ran to the door and drew the bolt.

"He shall not come in before I am gone," said he, "and when I am gone you can open the door for him."

"But I ought to be gone too. And the disappearance of his money—how am I to justify it if I am here?"

"You are right. We must go out."

"Go out? How? He will see us if we go out."

"Then you must come up into my room. You will be as safe as in a temple. I give you my word as a gentleman."

"Let us go, then. I place full confidence in you, my friend."

Once in his apartment, for greater security the young man barricaded the door. They both went up to the window, and through a slit in the shutter they saw M. Bonacieu talking with a man in a cloak.

At the sight of this man D'Artagnan started, half drew his sword and sprang toward the door. It was the man of Meung.

"What are you going to do?" cried Mme. Bonacieu. "You will ruin us all!"

"But I have sworn to kill that man!" said D'Artagnan.

"At this time your life is devoted and does not belong to you! In the name of the queen I forbid you to go! In my own name I beg you! But listen; they appear to be speaking of me."

M. Bonacieu had opened his door and, seeing the apartment empty, had returned to the man in the cloak, whom he had left alone for an instant.

"She is gone," said he. "She must be gone back to the Louvre."

"Is the young guardsman at home?"

"I do not think he is, but I will ask

"To her and to you!" cried D'Artagnan. "Be satisfied, lovely Constance. I shall prove worthy of her gratitude. But shall I likewise return worthy of your love?"

The young woman only replied by the beautiful glow which mounted to her cheeks. A few seconds after D'Artagnan went out in his turn, enveloped likewise in a large cloak, which ill concealed the sheath of a long sword.

D'Artagnan went straight to the hotel of M. de Treville. He had reflected that in a few minutes the cardinal would be warned by this cursed unknown, who appeared to be his agent, and he judged, with reason, he had not a moment to lose.

M. de Treville was in his saloon with his habitual court of gentlemen. D'Artagnan, who was known as a familiar of the house, went straight to his cabinet and sent word to him that he wished to see him upon an affair of importance.

D'Artagnan had been there scarcely five minutes when M. de Treville entered. At the first glance and by the joy which was painted on his countenance the worthy captain plainly perceived that something fresh and extraordinary was on foot.

"You will pardon me, I hope, for having disturbed you when you know the importance of my business," said D'Artagnan.

"Speak, then. I am attentive."

"It concerns nothing less," said D'Artagnan, lowering his voice, "than the honor, perhaps the life, of the queen."

"What do you say?" asked M. de Treville, glancing around to see if they were alone.

"I say, monsieur, that chance has rendered me master of a secret!"

"Is this secret your own?"

"No, monsieur; it is her majesty's."

"Are you authorized to communicate it to me?"

"No, monsieur."

"Why, then, are you about to betray it with respect to me?"

"Because without you I can do nothing, and I was afraid that you would refuse me the favor I am come to ask if you were not acquainted with my object."

"Keep your secret, young man, and tell me what you wish."

"I wish you to obtain for me from M. D'Artagnan leave of absence for a fortnight."

"When?"

"This very night."

"You are leaving Paris?"

"I am going on a mission."

"May you tell me whither?"

"To London."

"Has any one an interest in preventing your arriving there?"

"The cardinal, I believe, would give anything in the world to prevent my success."

"And you are going alone?"

"I am going alone."

"In that case you will not get beyond Bondy. You will be assassinated. In enterprises of this kind, in order that one may arrive, four must set out."

"Ah, you are right, monsieur!" said D'Artagnan. "But you know Athos,

CHAPTER XIV.

The Lover and the Husband.

AH, madame," said D'Artagnan
as he entered by the door
which the young woman had opened for him, "allow me to tell you that you have a bad sort of a husband there!"

"You have then overheard our con versation?" asked Mme. Bonacieux.
"How?"

"By a mode of proceeding known to myself."

"And what did you understand by what you heard us say?"

"That it gives me an opportunity of placing myself at your service. The queen wants a brave, intelligent, de voted man to make a journey to Lon don for her. I have at least two of the qualities you stand in need of, and here I am."

Mme. Bonacieux made no reply, but her heart beat with joy, and secret hope shone in her eyes.

"And what pledge can you give me,"
asked she, "if I consent to confide this message to you?"

"My love for you. Do you know Athos, or Porthos or Aramis?"

"No; who are these gentlemen?"

"Three of the king's musketeers. Do you know M. de Treville, their cap tain?"

"Oh, yes, I know him; not personal ly, but from having heard the queen speak of him more than once as a brave and loyal gentleman."

"You are not afraid that he would betray you for the sake of the car dinal?"

"Oh, no, certainly."

"Well, reveal your secret to him and ask him whether you may not safely
confide it to me."

"But this secret is not mine."

"Why, you were going to confide it to M. Bonacieux," said D'Artagnan, with an offended tone. "Put me to the proof!"

Madame Bonacieux looked at the young man, restrained for a minute by a last hesitation, but there was such an ardor in his eyes, such persuasion in his voice that she felt herself drawn on to place confidence in him.

"Listen," said she. "I yield to your protests, I yield to your assur ances. But I swear to you that if you betray me and my enemies pardon me,
I will kill myself while accusing you
of my death."

"And I, I swear to you, madame,"
said D'Artagnan, "that if I am taken while accomplishing the orders you give me, I will die sooner than do anything

"She is gone," said he. "She must be gone back to the Louvre."

"Is the young guardsman at home?"

"I do not think he is, but I will ask his servant."

Bonacieux went into the house again,
passed to D'Artagnan's door and knocked.

No one answered. Porthos, to make a greater display, had that evening borrowed Planchet. As to D'Artagnan, he took care not to give the least sign of existence.

At the moment the finger of Bon acieux sounded on the door the two young people felt their hearts bound within them.

"There is nobody within," said Bon acieux.

"Never mind. Let us walk into your apartment. We shall be better there than in the doorway."

"Oh," whispered Mme. Bonacieux,
"we shall hear no more!"

"On the contrary," said D'Artagnan,
"we shall hear the better."

D'Artagnan raised the loose boards, spread a carpet, went down upon his knees and made a sign to Mme. Bonacieux to do as he did, stooping down toward the opening.

"And you think that your wife"—
said the unknown.

"Is returned to the Louvre. The news I brought you is valuable?"

"Very, my dear Bonacieux. I don't attempt to deny it."

"Then the cardinal will be pleased with me?"

"No doubt he will. Are you sure that in her conversation with you your wife mentioned no proper names?"

"No; she only told me she wished to send me to London to further the in terests of an illustrious personage."

"Never mind," continued the man in the cloak. "It was very silly of you not to have feigned to accept the mis sion. You would now be in pos session of the letter. The state, which is now threatened, would be safe, and the cardinal would have given you letters of nobility."

"Did he tell you so?"

"Yes."

"Be satisfied," replied Bonacieux.
"My wife adores me, and there is still plenty of time."

"What do you mean by its being still time?" asked the man in the cloak.

"I will go to the Louvre, I will ask for Mme. Bonacieux, I will tell her I have reflected upon the matter, I will renew the affair. I will obtain the let ter and I will run directly to the car dinal's."

"Well, begone then! Make all pos sible haste. I will shortly come back to learn the result of your plan."

The unknown went out.

"Base old fool!" said Mme. Bonacieux, addressing this affectionate epi
thet to her husband.

"Silence," said D'Artagnan.

A terrible howling interrupted these reflections of D'Artagnan and Mme.
Bonacieux. It was her husband who had discovered the disappearance of his money bag and was screaming out,
"Thieves, thieves!"

"Oh," cried Mme. Bonacieux, "he will rouse the whole quarter!"

Bonacieux cried for a long time, but
as such cries on account of their fre quency did not attract much notice in the Rue des Fossyeurs, finding that nobody came, he went out.

"Now he is gone, it is your turn to enterprises of this kind, in order that one may arrive, four must set out!"

"Ah, you are right, monsieur!" said
D'Artagnan. "But you know Athos, Porthos and Aramis, and you know if I can dispose of them."

"Without confiding to them the se cret which I was not willing to know?"

"We are sworn, once and forever, to implicit confidence and devotedness against all proof; besides, you can tell them that you have full confidence in me, and they will not be more incredulous than you."

"I can send to each of them leave of absence for a fortnight, that is all Athos, whose wound still gives him incon venience, to go, to the waters of Forges; to Porthos and Aramis to ac company their friend."

"Thanks, monsieur; you are a hun dered times kind!"

"Begone, then, find them instantly and let all be done tonight. Ha! but first write your request to M. Des sesser."

D'Artagnan drew up his request, and
M. de Treville, on receiving it, assured him that by 2 o'clock in the morning
the four leaves of absence should be granted.

"Have the goodness to send mine to Athos' residence. I should dread some disagreeable encounter if I were to go home."

"I will, Adieu, and a prosperous voyage!"

D'Artagnan's first visit was for Ara
mis. He found Aramis this evening sitting up, but melancholy and thought ful.

After the two friends had been chat
ting a few instants a servant from M.
de Treville entered bringing the leave of absence for Aramis.

"What does all this mean?" asked Aramis.

"Pack up all you want for a jour ney of a fortnight and follow me."

"But I cannot leave Paris just now without knowing—" Aramis stopped.

"What is become of her? I suppose you mean"— continued D'Artagnan.

"Become of whom?" replied Aramis.

"The lady who was here, the lady of the embroidered handkerchief."

"Who told you there was a lady here?" replied Aramis, becoming as pale as death.

"I saw her."

"And you know who she is?"

"Well, I think I can give a pretty good guess at least."

"Then," said Aramis, "since you ap pear to know so many things, can you tell me what is become of that lady?"

"I presume that she is gone back to Tours. She was in fear of being ar rested."

"Why did she not write to me then?"

"Because she was afraid of compro mising you."

"Well, then, since she has left Paris
and you are sure of it, D'Artagnan, nothing prevents me, and I am ready to follow you. You say we are going"—

A GREAT LONELY LAND.

Keewatin Is One of the Most Early Discovered Parts of Canada.

Keewatin, the new addition to the Province of Ontario, is a great lonely land of pulpwood and Laurentian rocks, with intervals of the Huronian overlying Keewatin formations, in which they are discovering mineral values up in old New Ontario, at Cobalt, Porcupine, and other places, today. It is a higher, bolder land as a rule than the region paralleling the southerly curve of James Bay immediately north of Toronto. Along the James Bay part of it are coastal flats with clay and boulder beaches reaching far out into the shallow water, and muskeg swamps inland. But northerly, past Cape Henrietta Marie, further along the Hudson Bay shore itself, the hills arise, and the granite outcrops of the world's most ancient rock. Underlying the alluvial flats of the river valleys, covered with muskeg moss, limestone occurs in level beds. At one time Hudson Bay spread over these lowlands, south and west, and pressed the mud sediment into stone. The country has been rising, the geologists say, lifting up out of the sea, during the last 10,000 years, or else the sea is receding. Geological efforts take time, however. The Hudson Bay harbors are safe for an age or two yet probably.

Of these new Ontario harbors on salt water, Moose Factory lies nearest to Toronto, Port Nelson farthest away. Both have been used for three

CAMP LIFE AT BISLEY

SURREY TOWN IS ONLY ALIVE TWO WEEKS EACH YEAR.

It Was In 1830 That the Drowsy Little Place Became Famous and Wimbleton Lost Her Glory—Armies of Marksmen Are Provided For Luxuriously as if by Magic When the Time Comes—Tables on the Sward.

For centuries the little Surrey village of Bisley had its sleepy being, remote from the tide of men. Then, in the year 1830, came a dramatic revolution in its unchronicled life. Bisley awoke from her long slumber to find herself famous, her name as familiar almost at the other end of the world as that of London itself. The mantle, removed from Wimbleton, was placed on her diffident shoulders; and thousands of stalwart soldiers were drawn to her from the four corners of the earth. She had become the Mecca of the Empire's marksmen, with a proud place in the map of England.

Even now, however, in her changed guise, Bisley is still allowed to slumber for fifty weeks of every year. If you take the train from Waterloo to Brookwood in any one of these somnolent weeks, and continue your journey to Bisley, you will see little on her famous common to suggest her glory. In High street, it is true, you will see a stately and desolate pavilion, staring blankly at the offices of the National Rifle Association over the way. You may wander past rows of empty and dreary wooden huts and explore a few bungalows, the local headquarters of certain shooting clubs.

But of human life you will probably see scarcely a trace beyond a straggler or two, rifle in hand, making their way to the ranges from which comes to your ears the intermittent crackle of firing. Collect these scattered pilgrims to Bisley, and you may perhaps, if you are in luck, count a round score of them.

Bisley has not come to its annual awakening. But when each year brings round this dramatic moment, the revolution is such as may well make the least impressionable gasp with amazement. One day all is emptiness and desolation; a few days later a city has sprung into being as if by the touch of a magician's wand—a city of canvas, on which the eyes of the world are focussed. Once more Bisley is on millions of tongues, from Scotland to the Cape and the Antipodes; and thousands of the Empire's dastardly marksmen are flocking to its tented streets, every man of them bent on winning laurels for himself or the land of his home.

Within a week the solitudes of the common are humming with the coming and going of armies of uniformed men. It is no mere soldiers' camp that has sprung thus swiftly into being; it is a well-ordered, miniature city, with every equipment, not only for comfort, but for luxury. There are seductive restaurants, where any thirst can be quenched and the palate, even of the modest epicure, satisfied. There are billiard rooms and clubs, with every temptation to re-creation, from a game of bridge to a "hundred up." There are streets of shops, each with its tempting array of goods to meet almost any reasonable want, and to lure money from the pocket. There are hair-dressing salons.

FREAKS OF MARINE LIFE.

Barnacles May Serve Some Purpose, But It Is Not Apparent.

Barnacles are among the curious forms of marine life. So far as is known, they perform no important office, either constructive or destructive, in the economy of nature. They serve to no appreciable extent as food for the creatures of the depths; neither do they operate as a check upon other forms of marine life that might become redundant.

Strangely enough, barnacles are assigned by the naturalists to the same great subdivision of the animal world which includes insects—the anthropoda, which means joint footed. Barnacles belong to that class of crustaceans that embraces lobsters and crabs and constitutes the order of cirripedia, a term that means "curled feet."

Barnacles are hatched from eggs. The young in no way resemble the adults. Upon emerging from the eggs the young barnacles show themselves as free swimming little creatures with one eye, six legs and one shell. The young barnacle undergoes the operation of molting several times and finally appears with two eyes, twelve legs and two shells. At this state it roves no longer, but attaches itself to some convenient object by means of its antennae, secreting a cement whereby it glues itself quite fast. Then it undergoes a metamorphosis that completely changes its appearance. It loses its bivalve shell and its eyes and acquires its characteristic cirripeds or curled feathery legs, and it takes on an entirely new shell.

Three orders of barnacles exist. Members of one order are attached by

Of these new Ontario harbors on salt water, Moose Factory lies nearest to Toronto, Port Nelson farthest away. Both have been used for three centuries by the Hudson Bay Co. in the fur trade. Both, to fit them for the modern ships of commerce, will have to be dredged. Moose River can be opened up with a two-mile channel through the bar across its mouth. The present channel ranges from about 25 to 7 feet low tide. Similarly with Port Nelson. The Hudson Bay ships anchor two miles out, and their cargoes are lightered in small boats and flat scows.

Keewatin is much like the rest of New Ontario. It is not a land of agriculture, as is Old Ontario. Perhaps some day, when great mining camps have planted themselves up there in the rocky spruce-smothered hills, the demand for hay and oats, for potatoes, and for fresh meat, will bring about a considerable amount of mixed farming for the sweet sake of local markets, the demand of mining men and the hunger of the "muckers." But as contributors to the appetite of the outside world, as exporters of wheat, of beef, or of potatoes, it is doubtful if the rock-bounded farming patches or even the rich interval of clay which extends ninety miles or so back from the coast, at present under crop of muskeg moss, will enter into serious competition with the chocolate loam of the plains in the markets of Great Britain.—Toronto Star Weekly.

Structure of Fur.

Fur is a threadlike fiber which grows out of the pores of the skins of animals. It grows in length from the root and not from the top, as with vegetable productions. The lower portion merely lengthens out, and the top projects forward, consequently if once cut it will always remain blunt. It is tubular and filled with oil, which gives to the fiber its color. In addition to the oil it contains mineral matter, among which are sulphur and iron. A close examination of the fiber will, to a certain extent, show the section of the country the animal inhabits. The short and crisp, with an oval or angular cross section, indicates tropical growth; the long and soft, with circular cross section, a northern climate. The fibers from different parts of the same animal have a different structure and value, that which is taken from the back of a land animal being the finest, while the reverse is true of the animal which confines itself mostly to water, the under side being much finer than the back.

The Perfect Spanish Beggar.

There is a calm dignity about the Spaniard of every class which will strike a stranger. Even the beggars, of whom, goodness knows, there are plenty, seem to stand on a higher platform than their confreres in other lands. Here the statutory address is, "Could you spare me a copper?" but a Spanish beggar thus addressed us at a railway station, and we give his address as typical of his class, "O senorito, do me un alimontos, y regare por su felix viaje!" which may be translated into English thus: "Oh, little gentleman, give me an alms, and I will pray for you a happy journey."

shops, each with its tempting array of goods to meet almost any reasonable want, and to lure money from the pocket. There are hair-dressing saloons to provide the luxuries of a shampoo and a comfortable shave; and there are even boot-blacks, whose cry of "Shine, sir?" falls pleasantly on the ear.

Far and wide the eye ranges down avenues of glistening white tents, and is caught by the flutter of hundreds of flags of all the hues of the rainbow; while, that nothing may be lacking to please the senses, the air is musical with the tramp of marches played by the town band, or the lilt of dance melodies which stir the pulses and set the feet unconsciously a-jigging. And through every flag-decked, flower-decorated avenue of Canvas-town are streaming hundreds of sun-tanned soldier men, each carrying his cherished rifle, the winner of laurels to come.

And still they come in their thousands to this Mecca of tents. Watch the trains (or, more accurately, trams) as they disgorge, one after another, their human freight to swell the thousands already there—keen-eyed men from many points of the compass, hungry as hunters after their journey, and eager to show that the British marksman can eat as well as he can shoot.

If you are there about two o'clock in the afternoon you will see a sight that is good for the eyes and stimulating to the most jaded appetite. You will see tables by the furlong, spread on the greensward, and an array of steaming, succulent joints—baked meats, whose odor comes gratefully to the nostrils—and over which a white-clad chef flourishes a gleaming carving knife. A small army of police are squatting or lying on the grass; for there is little work for the civilian arm to do in keeping Mars in order.

But, in spite of the general atmosphere of luxury that Canvas-town presents, our marksmen are no Sybarites; and each man of them all, from officer to private, has his equipment rigidly prescribed, down to the water can and metal basin in the case of the latter, and the bath and tripod washstand in the case of his superior. But all that is necessary for comfort he has; and, after all, he has come on serious work, and not to play—although facilities for play are abundant when his work is done.

Balls are tabooed, it is true; and midnight is the signal for all lights out. And when the last shot is fired, and the King's prize-winner has been chaired amid tumults of cheers, there are few who do not regret that the time has sped so quickly, whether or not they have found a place on the roll of honor.

Then comes the dismantling of Canvas-town. The tide of humanity has once more receded and left it desolate; the far-spreading tents vanish as if by magic; and Bisley Common again slumbers.

In Doubt.

An aged colored man was passing a fish store when he stopped to examine a huge turtle chained in the doorway as an advertisement. He had never seen a turtle before, and he prodded the strange creature curiously. Suddenly he popped his finger into his mouth with a howl of pain. After the finger had stopped bleeding he gazed at it ruefully, then eyed the turtle apprehensively.

"What's the matter, Raastus?" asked the fish dealer, with a grin.

"Nuffin', sah, nuffin'. Ah was jest wonderin' whether Ah had been bit or stung."

legs, and it takes on an entirely new shell.

Three orders of barnacles exist. Members of one order are attached by the shell directly to rocks, timbers or other convenient objects. Those of another order are attached to floating objects by a long stalk, and the barnacles of the third order are parasitic upon crabs and other marine animals. When extended from the shell the curled, feathery appendages are in constant motion, and they create currents in the water that serve to convey to the curious little creatures their food, consisting of many species of minute forms of life abounding in the sea.

What are commonly known as "sea acorns" are nothing more than barnacles of the genus balanus. There exists a number of different varieties of these, showing shells of a white, greenish white, pink or purplish color. These barnacles attach themselves to rocks, shellfish, the piling of piers and sometimes even to whales. The base of the shell is glued firmly to the supporting object, there being no stem.

Ship barnacles are true wanderers of the deep, the same species frequently being found upon the hulls of vessels coming from the most remote and widely separated regions. They present a very odd appearance, for the shell is attached to the end of a flexible stalk, which varies in length from an inch in some species to twelve inches in others. Generally speaking, the shell of the ship barnacle is of a white or bluish white hue, and the stalk is brown or slate colored.

An Apt Pupil.

A professor who when asked a question was in the habit of saying, "That is a very good point indeed; look it up for yourself," was once much disgusted with a student who had failed to answer a very simple question. "Mr. Jones," said he, "I'm surprised that you, who are going to teach, cannot answer such an elementary question. Why, what would you do if one of your pupils were to ask it?" "Well, professor," replied the other, "if such a thing had happened before I came here I'm afraid I would have said plainly that I didn't know, but now I think I'd do just as you do and say, Look it up, my boy; look it up!"

Schliemann's Luck.

It is told of Schliemann, the excavator of buried cities of the ancient world, that he was pursued by ill-luck in his earlier undertakings. Mentioning the fact to a friend, the latter asked him which leg and arm he first inserted in trousers and coat. Schliemann said he habitually inserted his right. "That is the cause of your misfortunes," said his friend. "You have offended the left hand fairies, and they take out their vengeance on you. Reverse your habit and see." "And," said Schliemann in telling the incidents in his later and prosperous years, "you see how it changed my luck."

A Clear Case.

"You claim that the wheel of the defendant's car passed over your stomach," said the defendant's attorney to the plaintiff on the stand. "Yet here is your open-faced watch, which you testify to having carried in your vest pocket at the time, and the crystal isn't even cracked. How do you account for that?"

"Why," said the plaintiff, "the car was going so fast there wasn't time for the crystal to break, sir."

WORLD'S RECORD COW.

Notice Fine Udder Development of Daisy Grace de Kol.

The semiofficial yearly record of Daisy Grace de Kol as a junior four-year-old is a world's record and exceeds by over 200 pounds of fat the former record for her class. It also exceeds by 130 pounds of fat the highest record ever made in the senior four-year-old class. It also exceeds all official or semiofficial yearly records of full aged cows of other breeds. Her average per cent of fat for one year is 4.43, a showing that is wonderful.

In the eight months' division Daisy Grace de Kol broke the record for her class. During the verification test, when she was under constant watch day and night, she produced 48.3 pounds of milk which contained 2.39 pounds of fat.

Only two full aged cows besides her stable mates, Banostine Belle de Kol

LESSONS FROM FRENCHMEN.

Some Methods by Which They Grow Double Our Wheat Yield.

In France wheat farming is always combined with some other branches of agriculture, such as sheep raising or the growing of beets, and often the three go together successfully. In America we are accustomed to think that in order to raise wheat successfully one must plant hundreds of acres and devote his entire time to this crop. The statement that it doesn't pay to raise wheat on the small farms in the east is often heard, but is without foundation. The average wheat crop in the west, on the farms devoted exclusively to that cereal, is about fifteen bushels an acre; in France, where wheat is grown in rotation with other crops, the average is about thirty-five bushels.

The wheat farm that the writer visited comprises a thousand acres and is situated on a level plateau, from which on clear days the spires of Paris may be seen. On the afternoon of the writer's visit the men were all busy planting wheat and gathering beets. The first signs of life to be seen as the visitor approached were two flocks of sheep—about 1,200 in all—feeding on beet tops under the care of two shepherds with their dogs. Beyond the sheep and a bit nearer the buildings were the men loading beets into enormous two wheeled carts, each being drawn by three Percheron stallions driven tandem.

Beyond the harvesters were three sets of two furrow plows working, each drawn by six white oxen.

The plows, which were of the two furrow reversible type, were built with a pair of wheels in front to lighten the draft and with four plows keyed in pairs to two parallel steel beams, which were fastened to the axle of the wheels by a ball and socket joint. Each pair of plows was placed one over the other so that when one was in the furrow the mate was upside down in the air directly over it. At the end of the furrow the plowman by means of a lever turned each beam half round, throwing the plow with moldboard on the right hand side into the air and bringing the left hand moldboard into the furrow. The plowmen were followed by three teams of oxen that harrowed the field, and Practically everybody in Toronto knows Professor J. F. Davis. For years, the elite of that city has taken lessons from Prof. Davis in the art of Dancing and Deportment.

His constant activity gradually weakened his Kidneys, which calamity threatened to make him an invalid.

and High Lawn Hartog de Kol, have ever produced as much fat in one year as has Daisy Grace de Kol as a junior four-year-old.

Daisy Grace de Kol was bred, reared and developed at Maplecrest farm, owned by Dan Dimmick and brother, at East Claridon, O. She is more light than dark, beautifully marked and will weigh in the neighborhood of 1,350 or 1,400 pounds. She is very strong and vigorous, almost perfect in conformation, and if one were asked to name the one trait that predominates all others it would be that of giving milk that is very high in butter fat, her average per cent of fat for the year being 4.43. In this respect she resembles her dam, who is also high in butter fat. Daisy Grace de Kol was dry for about two months or ten weeks. She freshened at the age of four years, three months and thirteen days, this being the third time she had been fresh, showing that she is a good breeder.

PLANT TREES.

It pays in comfort and in looks to have a few trees about the farmyard. A treeless farm is a desolate looking place. There are trees adapted to every climate and soil as there are crops adapted to the different climatic and soil conditions. A few thrifty trees, trim and neat in their appearance, will make farm life more pleasant.—Kansas Farmer.

Feeding of Stallions.

A man reputed to be one of the best horse conditioners in the country gives stallions six pounds of oats in the morning, while the noon and evening meals are made up of five pounds of oats, eight quarts of bran and three quarts of chopped mixed hay. Carrots are fed at each meal, while mixed hay is kept before them nearly all the time.

was finally solved by a farm hand who dug deep holes in the center of such places and in each one sank two brine barrels, one on top of the other. The top barrel was covered. The water collected almost at once in these barrels, and the wet places dried up.—Farm Journal.

Two things for the farmer to do this fall—vote right and save the seed corn right, but save the seed corn first.

A Moorish Legend.

A certain sultan one morning commanded his prime minister to take a census of all the stupid people in his empire and let him have the correct list. The vizier set to work, and at the head of the list, which was a very long one, he placed the name of his sovereign. The latter happened to be in a good humor and merely inquired how he came to merit that distinction.

"Sire," the minister replied, "I have entered you on the list because only two days ago you intrusted large sums of money, for the alleged purpose of buying horses abroad, to a couple of men who are entire strangers and who will never come back again."

"Is that your opinion? But suppose they do?"

"Then I will erase your name and place theirs at the head of the list."

DON'T TRY FOR TOO MUCH.

Give Your Vegetables Room Is a Good Gardener's Motto.

Do not be afraid to thin out your plants. They must not be crowded. Probably more garden stuff has been ruined for want of being thinned at the proper time than by any other cause.

However that may be, one of the most puzzling things for the beginner is to find out whether any particular vegetable should be thinned or transplanted, and how far apart the plants should stand afterward.

He will get some help from the catalogues as to the distances, but wheth-

A number of new exhibits will be seen at the fair this year and some new attractive features presented. Do not fail to be in Napanee on Tuesday and Wednesday. A Live Stock Judging Competition for young farmers under 21 years of age will be held on Wednesday afternoon under the auspices of the Agricultural Department and will be a new and interesting feature. The Canadian Northern Railway will have an interesting exhibit at the fair.

Now Will They be Good.

Some Napanee boys have taken quite a fancy to Deseronto young ladies. The writer was quietly wending his way along Thomas street on Sunday evening in the vicinity of Prince street when he noticed a young lady crossing the street, closely followed by a young man. Of course, the gallant overtook the fair one, and with becoming chivalry raised his hat, and spoke a few words which were not understood by the onlooker. The young lady's reply, however, was easily heard. 'No, sir' was the quick response. The young man apparently did not expect the rebuff. He hardly knew which way to turn, but made the best of an awkward predicament. He endeavored to clear his throat of some impediment, crossed the street again on the other crossing, and disappeared down Prince street, doubtless with the feeling that this particular Deseronto girl was not 'easy.'—Deseronto Post.

Shocked by Lightning.

The electrical storm on Tuesday morning, between seven and eight o'clock, while no serious damage resulted, provided an experience for some of our citizens which was very thrilling indeed, and one which they would not like repeated. A bolt of lightning struck the electric light wires on Bridge street, near the West Ward school. Mr. F. James Roblin, Manager of the J. J. Haines shoe house, together with his little son, Don, were out in the yard at the time and were slightly shocked. Beyond a strangling feeling in the throat, which lasted a short time, no ill effects resulted. Three other children who were up-stairs in the house at the time were knocked down, but beyond a bad fright were not injured. Altogether it is an experience that Mr. Roblin and his family do not wish repeated. Mr. J. E. Robinson, who was on his way down to his place of business, also felt the effects of the same bolt of lightning. Several telephones in the residences in this locality were also burned out, and when the 'phone in the home of Mr. Chas. Stevens burned out Miss Florence, his daughter, received a slight shock.
